MY POLICY ABOUT YOUR USE OF DOWNLOADED DOCUMENTS

I have uploaded to this site a number of documents to make them more widely available to an interested audience. The materials here are here because I believe that they are, to use the TED Talks tag line, "Ideas Worth Spreading."

If what you have downloaded is written by me, I suggest you read it closely, but there may be mistakes. None of us is perfect. Some of these documents are earlier versions of copyrighted work. Others are my copyright, and you need permission from me to use figures and charts or to cite more than 50 words. That said, I do not charge for permissions, and am quite happy to give permissions where they are mine to give.

For example, the TR News article is available as a personal read, but the copyright is owned by the U.S. National Academies and their permission is needed to reproduce it.

The two ITF reports currently here may also be found at <http://www.internationaltransportforum.org/2009/workshops/pdf/ws1-Brooks.pdf>

Remember, spread good ideas and always provide credit for ideas you share.

Best wishes
